

BELLIGERENT EX-HUSBAND IS PUT IN JAIL

Last Friday afternoon the case of George Laufer of Blue Island charged with disturbing the peace and threats to kill by his divorced wife, Florence Laufer of Mokena, was called at the Mokena village hall. Attorney A. H. Krusemark representing Mr. Laufer asked for a change of venue and took the case to the court of Frank J. Kohlhaugen in Frankfort.

When the trial opened, Attorney Krusemark made the plea that Judge John F. Schultz of Mokena from whose court the change of venue was taken, had no jurisdiction in Cook County, consequently the papers he had issued for Laufer's arrest were void. He also pointed out that Wm. Knipple deputy sheriff of Frankfort township, had no jurisdiction to make arrests outside of Will County, and that he had served the warrant on Laufer in county which only a constable had the right to do and on these technicalities he asked that the case be dismissed.

Attorney Frank Brummund of Joliet, representing Mrs. Laufer refused to have the case dismissed and asked that new papers be issued and served by a constable as required by law. Mr. Laufer, when he saw he could not be held under the papers issued first, left the court room, got in his high powered car and drove back to Blue Island.

In the meantime Attorney Brummund got busy. He returned to Joliet, had a new warrant issued and sent Constable Wm. P. Larkin to Blue Island to get Laufer. The Constable advised the Blue Island police of the case and they made the arrest and turned Laufer over to the Will County officer who brought him back to Joliet about 11 o'clock the same night. Laufer was lodged in the Will County jail for several hours until he was able to raise money for $1000 bail bonds.

The case has been set for hearing next Monday morning at 10 o'clock in the court of Justice Joseph R. Zerbs at Joliet.

Wolf Road Paving Nearing Completion

The paving of Wolf Road in Orland township is nearing completion. Paving work was started this week at the Cook-Will county line north of Mokena and will be carried on northward to meet the paving which has been completed at the north end. It is expected that this highway will be open for traffic by September 30th.

North End of 51 Paving Finished

The paving of Route 51 from Kean Ave., at Orland Park to the Klose farm northeast of Mokena has been finished and work has been started on the south end. Paving is to be laid up to the Lincoln Highway at the four corners north of Frankfort where the paving will end for the time being, the route around Frankfort still being in dispute.

Emmerson to Put Mokena on Map

L. G. Bruder chairman of the Mokena Hard Road Association has the following letter from Louis L. Emmerson in reply to the letter he recently wrote regarding Wolf road and which was published in The News-Bulletin last week:

August 20, 1928.
Mr. L. G. Bruder, Chairman,
Old Colony Building, Chicago, Ill.
Dear Mr Bruder:

Upon my return to Springfield, after an absence of several days, I find on my desk your letter of August 13, which I have read with very great interest.

I would not have jurisdiction over matter you mention at this time, but if I am fortunate in being elected Governor in November, I shall be very glad to discuss the same with you at the proper time.

I also note that you state that the Village of Mokena has been neglected by me because it is not shown on the road map issued this year. Am very sorry about this mistake, but as you doubtless know, the maps that are issued by this office are gotten up by the map company and as we have no means of checking the same, as we take it for granted that the map is authentic. As before stated, I am very sorry this mistake occurred, and shall take this matter up with the company.

With best wishes, and regretting that there is nothing that I can do for you at this time, I am,

Sincerely yours,
LOUIS L. EMMERSON

This Association is very anxious to have this gap paved and we wish to inquire if you will be kind enough to give us your valuable co-operation.

I am enclosing you herewith, copy of my letter to the Chicago Tribune.

Thanking you, we are,
Yours truly,

Circulate Petition For Golf Course

The Tinley Park Lions Club has the following petition in circulation addressed to the Cook County Forest Preserve Commissioners in regard to providing Bremen township with a free golf course:

"We, the undersigned, residents of Bremen Township, County of Cook in which township the said county of Cook has acquired certain acreage for Forest Preserves and which, as we understand it, is to be developed in accordance with the wishes of the public, respectfully petition your honorable committee to investigate the Forest Preserve property located at Ridgeland Avenue and 147th street for the purpose of converting it into a public golf course. The land in question extends north to the Midlothian turnpike, is practically void of trees, and we believe, after careful investigation you will agree with us that it will make an ideal golf course.

"We also believe that your investigation will develop the fact that Bremen township has not been favored with any improvements of this character, and which, as you are aware, are being enjoyed by residents of other townships.

"We respectfully call your attention to the fact that the local-

Start Paving of S. W. Highway At Palos Park

The much talked of Southwest Highway is going to be a reality before long. Work on paving this highway from the vicinity of the Southmoor Golf Club in Palos to Orland Park will be started in the next few days. Machinery has been shipped in the past week for doing this work. The pavement is to be 20 feet wide from Palos to Orland for the present. The roadbed, bridges and culverts, however, are being built for a forty-foot roadway which will eventually be built when the main Southwest Highway will be built thru Orland township to Joliet. The present route into Orland is a spur it is understood and will come out on 143rd street near the Zerbs garage. This part of the Southwest Highway will be completed yet this fall.

Negro Bootleggers Compete for Trade

The moonshine racket is thriving in Mokena, in fact it appears that the local bootleggers cannot supply the demand so outside bootleggers are invading the field. On Monday a negro woman came to town with a suitcaseful of moon and is said to have peddled it at the route 51 road camp east of Mokena and done a rushing business. It is no uncommon sight to see drunken road men staggering on the streets of Mokena and many of these fellows get so drunk that they lay alongside the highway and in the ditches.

Mrs. Mary Mau, residing in the east end of the village reports that about two o'clock Tuesday morning her invalid daughter, Mrs. Florence Mahoney was awakened by a sound as if someone was trying to enter the house. When Mrs. Mau investigated she found one of the drunken road men lying on her porch. He tried the doors and windows several times trying to gain entrance. Mrs. Mau and her invalid and the latter's small son were alone and were very badly scared.

It is reported that even small boys are offered moonshine and drink it.

GARDEN CLUB PREPARING FOR FLOWER SHOW

The Tinley Park Garden Club met with Mrs. Bert Fulton last week. One of the main subjects discussed were the arrangements for the club's first annual picnic, to be held at Boyer's woods on Sunday, August 26th, at 12:30. A good time is promised and the club is hoping that every member and their families will be there. Ice cream and a slice of the club's first birthday cake will be served to all present.

The Club was formed one year ago with the desire to promote more interest in the development of more attractive home flower gardens and to create a greater appreciation of gardening. Members of the club have the same eager spirit for rapid advance to perfection that their like elsewhere have consistently manifested in the last ten of fifteen years.

Mrs. Lulu Rogers, chairman of the civic committee, with Mrs. J. Klepper and Mrs. Henry Brueggeman assisting, were appointed judges for the most improved home surroundings and garden contest for which the Garden Club is offering a $5 cash prize and three ribbon prizes. The judges will visit each improved garden in the near future and the prizes will be awarded.

Because flower gardening is becoming so popular, it is now necessary to at least be familiar with the names of the old aristocratic families in flowerdom's Who's Who. One can pay no greater compliment to a gardener's work than to call by their names the various flowers growing in his garden. It is important to get the names of flowers

Don C. Hall Says

It has been aptly said, that, "All things work together for good", and the saying is especially applicable to the present Political tuss in Illinois.

If no greater benefit has come to the State in the nomination of Floyd Thompson by the Democrats, than his resignation from the Supreme Court bench, we must be grateful to our Democratic Friends for this signal service.

The campaign tactics, of the "gentleman with the Judicial mind" are reprehensible to say the least. Where we might have had reason to expect words of wisdom and sound doctrine and advice with regard to stability in State Government in its various departments, we have been regaled with wordy VAPORINGS OF VAPID VITUPERATION, SPLEEN, BILLINGS-GATE and BALLYWAGGLE, without rhyme or reason or any substantial fact to back up the virulent and malignant statements, coined for the purpose of defamation alone.

PAUL IN A ROMAN PRISON

LESSON TEXT—Acts 16:16-40.
GOLDEN TEXT—Rejoice in the Lord always; and again I say, Rejoice.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul in Jail.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul in Prison.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Source of Paul's Joy.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Paul As an Evangelist.

1. Paul and Silas in Jail (vv. 16-26).

1. The occasion (vv. 16-24).
As the missionaries went out from day to day to the place of prayer they were accosted by a young woman possessed by a spirit of divination. She was owned by a syndicate of men who derived large gains from her soothsaying. Her utterances as she followed the missionaries became a great annoyance to Paul, who in the name of Jesus Christ commanded the evil spirit to come out of her. The spirit in this maid testified that these were servants of the Most High God and that they proclaimed the way of salvation. But Paul, like Jesus (Mark 5:7), would not have Satan's testimony. The evil spirit immediately obeyed Paul's command. When the demon was cast out, the supernatural power of the maid was gone, therefore the source of revenue was dried up. This so exasperated her owners that they brought Paul and Silas before the magistrates on the false charge of the changing of customs. It was not custom but their unlawful gain which was interfered with. There is always trouble when the unlawful business in which men are engaged is threatened.

2. Their behavior in jail (v. 25).

Paul and Silas prayed and sang hymns to God. It seems quite natural that they should pray under such circumstances, but to sing hymns is astonishing to all who have not come into possession of the peace of God through Christ. Even with backs lacerated and smarting, and feet fast in the stocks compelling the most painful attitude, in the dungeon darkness of the inner prison with extreme uncertainty before them, their hearts went up to God in gratitude.

3. Their deliverance (v. 26).

The Lord wrought deliverance by sending a great earthquake which opened the prison doors and loosed their bands.

II. The Conversion of the Jailer (vv. 27-34).

The jailer had small sympathy for the prisoners, for as soon as they were made secure, he went to sleep. Being suddenly aroused from slumber by the earthquake he was about to kill himself, whereupon Paul assured him that the prisoners were all safe. What he had heard of their preaching and what now he experienced caused him to come as a humble inquirer after salvation. He was convicted of sin and felt the need of the Savior. Paul clearly pointed the way to be saved, saying, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ." The word "believe" means to trust and fully obey. The proof that the jailer was saved is threefold:

1. Transformation from brutality to tenderness (v. 33).

He who a little while ago could with impunity lay on the cruel lashes is now disposed to wash their wounds.

2. Confession of Christ in baptism (v. 33).

Those who have really been convicted of sin and have experienced the saving grace of God delight to confess their faith in Him under all circumstances.

3. He set meat before them (v. 34).

His whole household baptized (v. 33).

When a man's family is willing to follow him, you may be sure that his conversion is genuine.

III. The Magistrates Humbled (vv. 35-40).

1. Orders to release the prisoners (vv. 35, 36).

The earthquake brought fear upon the magistrates and thus moved them to give leave for the prisoners to go.

2. Paul's refusal to go (v. 37).

The ground of his refusal was that their rights as Roman citizens had been violated. They demanded public vindication.

3. Brought out of prison by the officers (vv. 38, 39).

Because they were Roman citizens they were released, the magistrates fearing what they had done.

4. Returned to the house of Lydia (v. 40).

Upon their public vindication they left the prison and entered the house of Lydia, and after ministering comfort to the brethren, they departed.

BLOUSE DRAWS ATTENTION; COLOR IS IMPORTANT FEATURE

Striking Country Club Costume.

WHAT with the elegance and gorgeousness of the materials which go to make up the autumn blouse, the theme becomes one of exciting interest. The autumn trend is toward formality. That is the blouse is not made so much a utilitarian thing of convenience, but rather it is an expression of luxurious loveliness.

Glittering and colorful cloths of impressive splendor, richly toned brocaded chiffons, velvet prints in exotic hues and a host of other imposing materials—of such is the autumn blouse fashioned.

Not only are the fabrics for the blouse of super-beauty, but they are styled with intriguing details which multiply their charm. Bows are playing a most fascinating decorative role, appearing often, one at the neckline, one at the hipline and sometimes little bows tied at the wristline—not ribbon, bows so much as bows of self material. There are jabots, too, a plenty, and surprise fastenings and that which is newest, the draped attached border which encircles the hips, trying in a soft bow at one side. This wrap-around the hipline is so designed as to achieve a bloused effect above it. This is decidedly a favorite silhouette for fall.

The dernier cri for sleeves of contrasting fabric, more especially those of chiffon for the blouse of velvet brocade. A bit of the brocade is then used to trim the sleeve with results which are wonderfully effective. A superb color harmony reigns throughout chiffon sleeve and brocade blouse.

So pronounced is the vogue for velvet it enters even into the sports realm. As a medium for sports clothes rayon velvet is especially indorsed. A striking country club costume is shown in the picture. The blouse is made of striped transparent rayon velvet in green and white with a finely plaited white crepe skirt.

Unusual attention is directed to the skirt which unites with the blouse to make the smart autumn costume. Perhaps the handsomest are those of plaited velvet, some of which have scalloped hemlines.

Color is the central theme around which all fashion themes are revolving for fall and winter. The mode having elected to glorify color, is doing so in ways as varied as they are fascinating.

Sometimes color is emphasized by striking contrast and modernistic novelty. Just as often it asserts itself through exquisite monotone effect for the costume from head to foot. There is that air of exclusiveness about the costume in the picture which is always bespoken when a one-color scheme is studiously carried out. This smart ensemble is of light-weight wool crepe. A jabot trimming on the blouse helps carry out the one-color idea. The skirt is plaited, for the wide hemline is evidenced even in tailored modes in the new showings. Developed in a light russet brown, it tunes in most lovely with the autumn landscape, even to its matching felt toque.

The footwear and hat worn with this costume are identical in shade, which they should be, to be modish. If the fashion-wise woman does not succeed in accurately matching every detail of her costume in the shops, she takes her hosiery and accessories to the expert dyer who nowadays takes pride in "telling the world" that he will produce a "perfect match."

It seems that brown is appointed by the mode to carry the honors for fall. Even one's costume flowers are dyed brown. Huge clusters of brown violets are tremendously attractive. To complement the brown costume mil

WHEN YOU ENTERTAIN

When a larger number of people is being entertained one plans a menu which may be served on one plate, as a stand-up luncheon must be served.

A hot dish, either in patty shell or as a pie, a salad, small dish of salted peanuts, an olive or two and two sandwiches, will make a good menu. For the hot dish the following will be suggestive:

Creamed Chicken With Mushrooms.—Put four tablespoonfuls of butter and a slice of onion finely chopped in a saucepan and cook two minutes. Add four tablespoonfuls of flour, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper, and when smooth add one cupful of boiling water in which one cube of chicken bouillon has been dissolved. Stir until the sauce boils, add one cupful of thin cream, one and one-half cupfuls of cooked chicken cut in dice, about the size of half a dollar, and one-fourth pound of mushrooms which have been sautéed in two tablespoonfuls of butter for three minutes. Serve in timbal cases, patty shells or on toast. A twelve-ounce can of tuna fish may be used instead of chicken.

Piquant Sandwiches.—Cream six tablespoonfuls of butter, add four tablespoonfuls of horseradish, one bunch of watercress chopped, one teaspoonful of lemon juice and a little salt. Spread on thin slices of bread and cut in fancy shapes.

Nut and Cherry Sandwiches.—Cut bread one-fourth inch in thickness and spread with creamed butter. Spread one slice with finely chopped pistachio nuts and one slice with finely chopped maraschino cherries, cover with a third slice of buttered bread. Place under a light weight until cold. Slice in thin slices. Chopped green pepper may replace the pistachio nuts and pimento may be used in place of the cherries, moistening with mayonnaise. Creampudding filled with ice cream and covered with a chocolate or maple sauce make a most delightful dessert.

Baked Eggs.—Take two cupfuls of rice potatoes, add two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-third of a cupful of milk and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Beat vigorously three minutes; add one and one-half canned pimientos forced through a sieve, and continue beating until thoroughly blended. Pile evenly on a buttered baking dish and make six cavities. In each cavity drop a raw egg; salt and pepper and dot with butter. Bake until the eggs are set.

Summer Foods.

Creamed lobster, lobster bisque or salad are all most enjoyed dishes at any season, but are especially well liked during warm weather when oysters are not on the market.

Lobster With Mushrooms.—Wash, peel and cut one pound of fresh mushrooms in pieces. Sauté them in four tablespoonfuls of butter. Add three tablespoonfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful of paprika. Cook five minutes then add one and one-half cupfuls of milk and one-half cupful of stock (made from fish bones), cook three minutes, add one-half cupful of cream, two cupfuls of canned lobster and two egg yolks well beaten. Pour into a well-greased casserole, cover with one-third of a cupful of buttered crumbs and bake ten minutes in a hot oven.

Lobster à la King.—Simmer one-half cupful of minced green pepper, the same of celery and one tablespoonful of minced pimento in one tablespoonful of butter until tender. Add one tablespoonful of flour and when mixed one cupful of milk, added gradually. Season with salt, cayenne, and add two cupfuls of cooked flaked lobster. Heat thoroughly and serve on toast.

Icebox Cake.—Line a bread pan or round mold with quarter-inch slices of any standard sponge cake. Put over this a layer of canned apricots, cut in pieces, then a thick layer of whipped cream lightly sweetened and flavored with almond, another layer of cake and cream with apricots until the mold is full. Then pour over it the apricot juice which has been cooked with one-half cupful of sugar until thick, and cooled. Set away in the ice chest for 12 hours or longer, then turn out on a serving dish. It may be garnished with more whipped cream and bits of apricot.

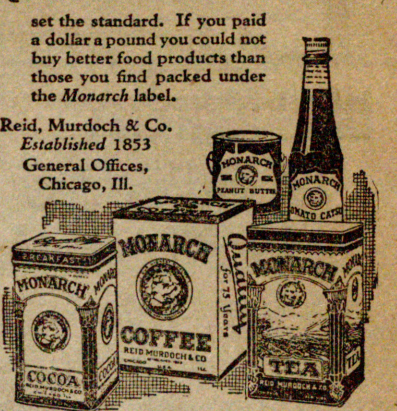

Orange Delicious.—Boil two cupfuls of sugar with one cupful of water, eight minutes, then add two cupfuls of orange juice. Scald one cupful of cream, add the yolks of two eggs and cook over hot water until thick, add a pinch of salt and cool, then add to the first mixture with one cupful of heavy cream beaten stiff. Freeze; when nearly frozen add one-quarter of a shredded, candied orange peel. Line a melon mold with orange ice and fill with orange delicious. Pack in ice and salt and let stand two hours.

Something Wrong Somewhere

A celebrated soprano was singing a solo in the village hall, when a very old villager turned to the man next to him and asked in an audible whisper:

"Garge, whoi does that man keep on hittin' the girlie with his stick?"

His friend tried to explain. "That's the conductor of the band," he began. "He's keeping time; he ain't hittin' her."

"Whoi, then," objected the old ciron, "whoi is she hollerin'?"

OF HAPPINESS

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

MONDAY, September 3, marks the forty-sixth anniversary of a holiday which is a red letter event on all American calendars. For that is Labor day, the day which all workers, if they observe the tradition of its founding, should make a "festival day with parades, speech-making and picnics." Of course, the manner of our celebrating all of our holidays undergoes a change through the years, and this applies to Labor day, even though it is one of the "youngest," as well as to the others. But it is interesting to note how Labor day first came into being and how it was celebrated four decades ago.

The history of Labor day, as told by a chronicler in the Herald-Tribune of New York, where it originated, is as follows:

A little group of workers in New York city heard the suggestion marking the birth of Labor day and creating a holiday which has encircled the globe. The idea originated May 8, 1882, at a session of the then newly formed Central Labor union of the metropolis. Its sponsor was P. J. McGuire, who was one of the best known labor leaders of his day, for many years secretary of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America and a vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

McGuire's thought was that one day in the year should be set aside as a general holiday for the men and women who toil. In its initial form the plan contemplated a Labor day, pure and simple, for observance by those who work with hands and muscle. The first celebration of the holiday took place in New York September 5, 1882.

Since that modest beginning the world has taken Labor day to its heart as one of the most important holidays on the calendar. The voice of McGuire has been heard round the world, and by all classes of the population. Labor's holiday has become an international institution for millionaires and workers alike—a festival of relaxation and recuperation for all strata of the social structure. No holiday of the year has greater popularity.

A basic reason for the vogue of Labor day is to be found in the wisdom shown by its originator in choosing the date for the celebration. McGuire's choice was the first Monday in September as a strategic date midway between the Fourth of July and Thanksgiving day. His feeling that this was the most suitable day of the entire year for a new holiday found ready echo in the minds of workers, offering a respite from toil after the blistering weather of July and August. Everybody was ready for a rest at this particular season, and there was prompt response to the suggestion of a double holiday over Sunday and Monday. In recent years there has been a pronounced tendency toward a triple holiday, causing the rest period to extend from Friday evening to Tuesday morning. No other holiday of the year offers similar advantage year in and year out.

After the New York celebration of 1882 the popularity of Labor day grew with increasing swiftness until it had extended to practically every state in the Union. It now covers the island possessions of Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Formal action toward nationalizing the holiday was taken by the predecessor of the American Federation of Labor at its annual convention in Chicago in October, 1884. The body was known as the Federation of Organized Trades and Labor Unions of the United States and Canada, then four years of age and strikingly small in comparison with the mighty federation of today. At the Chicago convention, for example, there were but twenty-six delegates, representing a constituency of nineteen international unions, local bodies and central labor unions. The annual report of the financial officer placed the year's expenditures at $543.20, with a treasury balance of $188.04 at the end of the fiscal period. This offers strange contrast with the recent report of the federation, showing a year's receipts of $518,451 and a balance of more than $210,000.

At the Chicago convention the delegates adopted a resolution intended to give Labor day observance national importance. The resolution stipulated that the first Monday in September should be set apart as "a laborers' national holiday," and recommended its observance "by all wage workers, irrespective of sex, calling or nationality."

Popular response for spontaneous, but untiring effort and co-operation on the part of organized labor were required for the procurement of legal sanction for the suspension of work. Congress and state legislative bodies received vigorous and insistent requests for the enactment of federal and state laws recognizing the day as a legal holiday. Ten years elapsed before the passage of a congressional act establishing the first Monday in September as a legal holiday for the District of

THE THINKER

Back of the beating hammer,
By which the steel is wrought,
Back of the workshop's clamor
The seeker may find the Thought,
The Thought that is ever master
Of iron and steam and steel,
That rises above disaster
And tramples it under heel!

The drudge may fret and tinker
Or labor with dusty blows,
But back of him stands the Thinker,
The clear-eyed man who knows;
For into each plow and saber,
Each piece and part and whole,
Must go the Brains of Labor,
Which gives the work a Soul!

Back of the motors humming,
Back of the belts that sing,
Back of the hammers drumming,
Back of the cranes that swing,
There is the eye which scans them,
Watching through stress and strain,
There is the Mind which plans them—
Back of the brawn, the Brain!

Might of the roaring boiler,
Force of the engine's thrust,
Strength of the sweating toiler,
Greatly in those we trust,
But back of them stands the Schemer,
The Thinker who directs things through;
Back of the Dreamer,
Who's making the dream come true!

—Berton Braley.

Columbia and the territories. Oregon has anticipated the federal law by legislative act passed in 1893. Other states fell in line one by one, until the day now ranks as a legal holiday throughout the United States. In most states the status is established through statutory provision. In Wisconsin and Wyoming the observance comes through proclamation by the governors. In the Philippines the celebration takes place on May 1, in accordance with European custom.

The May day celebrations in Continental Europe owe their origin to American initiative. This foreign adoption of the McGuire idea came about in connection with the eight-hour movement inaugurated by the American Federation of Labor in 1883. The same year brought a meeting of the International Labor Congress in Paris. To this meeting a letter was addressed by Samuel Gompers, president of the American body, urging that the international organization should co-operate with the eight-hour movement by making a declaration of sympathy. In his letter Gompers appealed for demonstrations in all European countries to be conducted on May 1 of the following year. The congress complied and started the machinery for widespread continental demonstrations on May 1, 1890.

In this way it came about that the Gompers suggestion was the instrument which created May 1 as the Labor day of Europe. The start, made in 1890, caught the fancy of European workers and May day became the recognized time for demonstrations all over the continent.

In one respect there has been an important difference between the observance of Labor day in the United States and the practice of European workers with reference to the first of May. The American holiday is of recreational character, while European workers have tended to exaggerate the demonstrational system as a means of emphasizing their organized demands and grievances. The result of the early demonstrations was to invite governmental opposition, with frequent clashes between the workers and the police or military forces. In latter years, however, the May day observance has been given more largely to cessation of work, parades, meetings and commemorative exercises devoid of violence or disturbance. Europe has been slower than the United States in granting legal status as a holiday to the day selected by labor as the time for annual celebration. The countries which have recognized the first of May as a legal holiday are Austria, Czechoslovakia, Estonia, Finland and Madeira. South American nations recognizing the date are Colombia, Ecuador and Uruguay. Latin America in general follows the European custom of celebrating May day, and the day is a legal holiday in Haiti and Panama.

That the McGuire idea has spread round the world is shown by the circumstance that many British colonies and possessions have their own Labor days. Canada celebrates the first Monday in September, in keeping with the United States custom. Newfoundland observes September 2. Queensland and Western Australia follow the European practice and observe the first of May. "Eight-Hour day" is observed on April 21 in Victoria, Australia; on October 6 in New South Wales, and on October 14 in South Australia. The basic idea in all these countries is that which was voiced by P. J. McGuire in 1882.

Mention of the difference between the observance of Labor day in this country and in Europe, where it was the occasion for demonstrations to "emphasize their organized demands and grievances," recalls the fact that there was a time in the early history of Labor day in this country when the greatest concern of American workingmen was for the "right of labor." That concern was expressed in an editorial uttered by the late Samuel Gompers in the first Labor day editorial which he wrote after congress had made it a legal holiday. The editorial, which appeared in the American Federationist for September, 1894, follows:

In the cycle of time we are again on the dawn of our most important national holiday—Labor day. Most important, since it for the first time in the history of the world devotes a day to the recognition of the fact that the wage earners must hereafter be regarded as the important factor in the economy of life. In this day when so many look upon the dark side of the progress of the labor movement and predict worse things in store for the laborer, it is not amiss to direct attention to the fact that the life of the human family is one vast struggle, and that though the progress is not as swift as we, as well as our impatient brothers and sisters of labor, would like it to be, yet the fact that in our decade we can see the rights of labor more clearly defined, the vantage ground obtained, and obtaining a clearer insight into the existing wrongs, the more intelligent perception and determination to achieve labor's rights.

The past year has witnessed several contests, some of them defeats, but though defeated in the immediate object sought, they have awakened a new conscience in the American people, and will contribute more to the thorough organization of the wage workers of our country than hundreds of meetings, speeches or pamphlets. The great conquering armies in the history of the world have had their reverses, and the labor movement cannot expect to be an exception to that rule. Each defeat acts as a trenchant warning to the toilers of America that error must be avoided, that intelligence must prevail, and that no success can come to them unless it is through their own efforts and their own organization, and by their persistency manifested.

Pessimism results in indifference, lethargy and impotency and this in turn simply permits the corporations and trusts and the entire capitalist class to flinch from the toiler rights which have been dearly bought.

The organizations of labor must be thorough and complete and above all must be permanent! Those organizations which arise like a flash in the pan only go to show how arduous is the struggle before the toiler, in order to overcome the antagonism of the wealth-producing classes of our country.

Today more than ever the toilers recognize how essentially they are thrown upon their own resources; that they have few if any outside their own ranks who sympathize with them in their efforts for the emancipation of mankind.

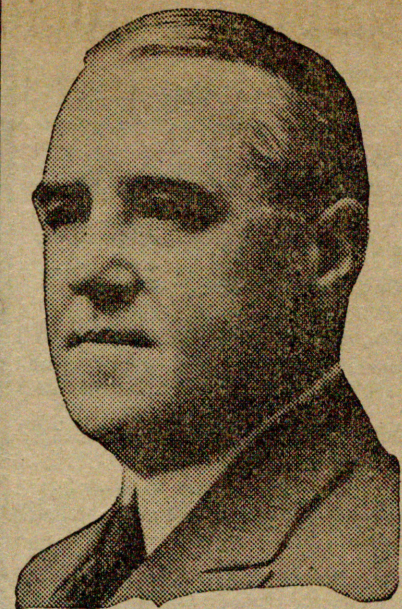

Toilers, organize. Let us carry on the good work and in a few more revolutions of the earth upon its axis we shall have a better world—a better mankind. Waiting will not accomplish it; doing it till another time will not secure it. Now is the time for the workers of America to come to the standard of their unions and to organize as thoroughly, completely and compactly as is possible. Let each worker bear in mind the words of Longfellow:

In the world's broad field of battle,
In the bivouac of life,
Be not like dumb, driven cattle!
Be a hero in the strife!

There is one significant statement in that editorial by the "Grand Old Man of American Labor." For when Samuel Gompers uttered the words "intelligence must prevail" he was giving it the keynote of what was destined to prove its soundest and most successful policy.

In the years which have followed since that editorial was written, however, the spirit of American labor, as exemplified in Labor day, has changed. It is still steadfast for the "right of labor," but it is also conscious of the responsibility of labor as well. Today the American laborer is the most prosperous of any in the world and that is because he has brought to his task an intelligent conception of both its rights and its obligations, a consciousness of the dignity of his job, no matter what it may be so long as he does it well, and as a thinker, as well as a doer, he is the backbone of the American nation today.

MOKENA

MOKENA M. E. CHURCH

Glen T. Beaty, Pastor.

Sunday School 10:30 A. M.

There will be no preaching service the next two Sundays. Mr. and Mrs. Beaty are taking two Sundays for a vacation period. They will remain in Evanston where they are in school until August 31st. Sunday school will be held these Sundays under the direction of Mrs. E. Cooper. Beginning with the second Sunday in September, we will resume evening services. Watch for the announcement.

The Ladies Aid are making preparations for their annual bazaar to be held October 25th in St. John church parlors. They will appreciate all assistance. They are also planning a bakery sale on Saturday, September 8th.

A heavy storm swept this section during Monday mid-night, resulting in some damage. Limbs were torn from trees, some trees were blown down and in one instance a wagon loaded with oat bundles was overturned.

A huge limb was torn from a tree in front of the old Philip Stellwagen building and hurled in the street blocking traffic until a path was cut around it. Trees all over town are more or less damaged.

Lighting struck the drug store of R. Hensel, ripping off some boards. Luckily the stroke was a cold one so no fire resulted.

The lighting display was very vivid the heavens being continually lit with giant flares. This one was one of the worst storms of the season.

Miss Florence Shevlin and Arthur Florence were quietly married Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Marie Shevlin. Rev. W. J. Cramer, pastor of the St. John Evangelical Church read the service. Only the members of the immediate family witnessed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Florence will make their home in Mokena.

A private dance will be held at the Mokena dance pavilion on Labor Day for the benefit of old time dancers. Admission will be by card only.

No trace has been found of the Ford coupe of Elmer Cappel which was stolen from the Men's Club pavilion grounds a week ago Saturday night.

A family reunion was held at the home of Mrs. Julius Hirsch Sunday afternoon and evening, fifty guests being present. A number of guests were present from Blue Island and Chicago.

The annual picnic held by the St. Mary Catholic church at the Men's Club pavilion Sunday afternoon and evening was well attended. Cards were played and dancing enjoyed.

Miss Loretta McGee of Chicago spent a few days this week with her sister, Mrs. John Horras.

A surprise party was held at the Wm. Semmler home Saturday night in honor of Miss Adeline Semmler's 11th birthday. The lawn was prettily lit with electric lights. A huge spider web was the chief feature of attraction. Various games were played and refreshments were served in the form of wienie roast with all that goes with it. The guests, numbering fifteen, were all children living along Neithammer avenue.

TELEPHONE COMPANY WINS PRIZE FOR ARTISTIC CENTRAL OFFICE

New Telephone Central Office Building at Oceanside, California

Oceanside, located on the sea-coast between San Diego and Los Angeles, is ambitious to develop into one of the higher class beach towns and, accordingly, the various local organizations are making every effort towards obtaining artistic buildings and grounds for their city. The "City Beautiful" committee of the town has just awarded to the telephone company the first prize for a combination of the most beautiful business structure and planting of adjacent grounds. This new telephone central office building shows how artistic beauty can be incorporated in a commercial structure and it has already demonstrated that the construction of such a building encourages neighboring property owners to make improvements in their property, thus helping the community as a whole, as an unsightly building nearby has already been torn down and other owners have made improvements which have materially helped the community.

Another Theory of the Flood.
A new theory of the flood has been discovered in South Africa. Hydrographers investigating the waterways of Uganda have found indications that Lake Victoria and other central African lakes were at one time vast inland seas, which a little excess of rainfall would cause to overflow into the lands to the north. The discovery of primitive stone implements along the old water levels prove these to have been within the "human" period.

"That I cannot say. Colonel Ogilvie was killed in the war and so was Von Schonbrunn. The man who was my secretary in Old Westbury—he is dead. Madame de Berlaymont, who was with me in Long Island, she is in prison in England for a long term of years. No, I think I am in no great danger, except from your police."

Lying back in her chair she stared out to sea. Trent wondered what of the past she was trying to capture—or forget. He would have given a great deal to know how much of her heart was filled by the two men she had loved. Probably she was a romantic girl when she met de Beaulieu and married him. The feeling had almost certainly been genuine. And then there was the ex-officer of lanciers, Captain Monmouth. Perhaps in the bitterness of finding his pride greater than his love, she had put aside all thought of him.

"There were statements about you in the papers yesterday," she said, after a long interval of silence, "which interested me very much. There was a reference to a certain lady of rank to whom it was said you had been engaged."

"It was true," he said quietly. "Some day I may have the opportunity to tell you of the extraordinary circumstances which took me to her home."

"It was said that she died very suddenly."

"Yes," he said slowly, "that is true. I have never spoken of it before. I have never felt able to. Looking back it seems like a dream. You know what I had been. Well, I was taken into the heart of one of those old, exclusive English families who do not welcome strangers or open their gates to wealth. It was there I felt the agony of being trusted when I was not worthy. One can't fight off love. I tried to, but it was too big for that. I was safe there. I felt like a battered ship which has come unexpectedly into a sheltered harbor. Because I was a guest in such a home none suspected me or even inquired. Yet, my own country folk did, because I did not grace the pages of their social registers. . . . I wonder if anyone will be able to understand me when I say that I was thankful she died before she could find out the life I had led. A score of times I wanted to tell her, but she wouldn't listen. She thought I wanted to confess some conventional indiscretions such as gambling debts. It was not in her heart to believe the man she loved had been a professional thief. I do not mean she was too proud to believe that. Rather it was her love which had cast out all doubt."

"We were to have been married in a few weeks. We were riding together. She was a very daring horsewoman and put her hunter at one of those granite boundary fences they have in Cornwall. She had taken the leap before, but perhaps this was the moment when her beautiful life was marked to end. I am not a religious man, mademoiselle; I have been one who sneered and disbelieved; it was not any fear of hell that made me give up the old ways. It was to keep faith with her."

The woman listening said no word. She could see that to such a silent, reserved man as this the relief of being able to speak of what he had kept hidden was very great.

"And yet I am glad that she died then, for it would have broken her heart to find me out. Her father had great properties in Australia, and we were to have gone there to live. I think he knew there were secrets I dared not tell him. He was a very wise and sad old man. Sometimes I think we might have lived without the shadow falling on us. But this meeting of yours with Pierre Redlich reminds me of what might have been in store. I do not think I could ever have had complete rest of mind. There is a high sense of honor which will not permit itself to be betrayed even by love. . . . I realized that as I went into the church, my head bowed as a mourner, and saw weeping men and women there instead of wedding guests."

He did not speak again until the launch came to its dock.

At the door of the Central Park apartment he left her. "I don't feel like talking to them tonight. You have been very good to listen to me." He pressed her hand and turned away abruptly.

CHAPTER XI

Trent Becomes a Producer.

David More returned to Fort Lee with a list of five houses which might suit his employer.

One of the five seemed to be exactly what Trent required. It was an old frame mansion of sixteen rooms standing in twenty acres of land. The rental was low because the absentee owner had allowed his property to get into a bad condition of repair.

To the west the gardens came to an end on a bluff about twenty feet above the railroad. An iron bridge crossed the tracks from this bluff. There was a flight of steep steps, with a padlocked gate at the bottom which descended to the flat land by the Hudson side.

A feature of the place which seemed to impress Trent was a flower garden, a hundred yards square. In the center of this waste was an old ruined summer house. From this nothing of the house or road could be seen. In front of it was the broad river.

"I like privacy," Trent told the agent.

"You'll surely get it here," said the man. "You are not overlooked and you've no near neighbors. There's iron gates to keep the crowd out, and there's one of the few outlets to the river which is legally yours to use. I haven't a more desirable property on my lists. If you want to buy I can make you a very low price."

"I might even do that in six months' time," Trent said. The situation was delightful, and he had long been thinking about giving up city life. It would be a pleasing jest to make his home within a few miles of the famous prison.

It was plain the agent was impressed by Trent's way of doing business.

"I'd like to have you in this part of the world," he said. "Take it from me, this side of the river can't be beat for beauty and convenience. As to train service, there isn't such a good one anywhere."

Trent gave him a check to stem the flood of eloquence which was let loose.

"Are you able to leave the store for a couple of weeks, maybe more?" Trent asked More. "I want you to come here and have the place cleaned up. I don't want you to have your family here. You can get what you want at the local stores. Don't encourage tradesmen to call. Is that clear?"

"Absolutely," said More. "I'll keep 'em off, Mr. Trent. A little exercise won't hurt me now I'm all rested up."

"I shall be back in a few days. I want you to get here before noon tomorrow."

A quality Trent appreciated in David More was his lack of inquisitiveness. None of the unusual remarks upon which Trent had sent him elicited surprise. His not to reason why.

Escape From Danger Makes for Pleasure

In escape from dangers of all kinds we find one of the greatest thrills in life. The small child asks to be chased and squeals with delight as she escapes; small boys skate over thin ice; grown men hazard their fortunes by gambling, and women risk their reputations by reading risqué stories—all that they may have the thrill of escaping from something.

The stories of universal appeal, from "Little Red Riding Hood" and "Jack the Giant Killer," up to the highest tragedies, are stories of escape or at tempted escape. Even our spiritual struggles are dramatized stories of escape. "The Pilgrim's Progress" is the story of Christian's escape from the City of Destruction, though the

It was three o'clock when Trent stopped before the brown-stone house where Clarke lived.

"Clarke," he said, after a short conversation, "did anybody ever tell you you looked like a cop?"

"It's been a godsend to me," he was told. "I could get through the police lines any time at all just on my face. Having to lick a bunch of cub reporters into shape began it. Why?"

There was a gravity about Trent's manner which he had not before revealed. "Have I ever asked a favor of you?" he demanded.

Clarke looked at him puzzled. Trent had done him innumerable good turns, as this very house proved. He had asked nothing in the way of repayment.

"No, son, you never have, and you could have asked quite a plenty. What's on your mind now?"

Anthony Trent talked to him for ten minutes. Clarke interrupted him now and then with a pertinent question.

"Will I do it?" he said, when Trent finished. "Boy, you know d—n well I will."

"That's a tremendous relief," Trent said gratefully. "When everything is ready I'll phone you and send a car for you. Tell your wife you are touring with me if she seems anxious."

"You've got a hard assignment ahead," Clarke commented, "and there's a raft of difficulties to overcome. Suppose he doesn't come through?"

"I shall be in the soup," Trent confessed. "I'm not disguising the fact that this isn't exactly legal, but I feel we can pull it off. I wouldn't ask you and the others if I thought there was much danger. I'll admit the risk, though."

"He ought to be a tough bird," Clarke commented. "He got away with it all right at the trial."

On the face of it, the Weems comedy seemed dead loss. But Trent had ideas concerning pictures which he did not share with his partner. It was to the Fort Lee studio he took his way after dinner. Weems was "shooting" at night, and the six-reel special would also be in course of production.

Trent spoke to the technical director.

"Which of those carpenters you're laying off do you recommend?" He had learned that with the completion of the feature's big sets not so many hands would be required.

"Those four," said the technical director. "Stafford, Clancy, Cleveland and Dale."

When Messrs. Stafford, Clancy, Cleveland and Dale were paid off they received instantly other positions. They knew Trent had an interest in a production. They presumed he was to be one of the new lights in filmdom. They had seen many such in a heaven where comets and falling stars were common phenomena.

Stafford was the foreman. He was a superior sort of mechanic who aimed at being a technical director some day. There were conditions in this new job which were unusual, but board and lodgings, plus pay, seemed too good to perish with questioning.

The Grant house party on his second visit was of a different character. As Anthony Trent recognized. Only Kathryn Holland remained of those who had been there before.

Less attention was given to lingering dinners and more to dancing and tennis. Payson Grant greeted Trent with effusion. He felt rather out of it with the younger men. He had played tennis only to find his wind was gone and his heart fluttering.

La Belle Alliance had been floated off on the highest tide of the year; she was undamaged and now in charge of harbor authorities. Investigation had discovered stolen property of all sorts. Redlich and his companions would not be brought to trial for some time.

One of the problems which perplexed Trent was how to deliver an other of Sutton's messages to Grant without attracting suspicion to himself. It was unlikely that Grant would think one of his guests culpable; but there was always the possibility of it.

As before, he was struck with the lavish richness of the house and its appointments. It represented part of the fortune Sutton had amassed and laid at the feet of the woman who betrayed him. A lawyer had told Trent that her position was secure. The gift had been made freely and without compulsion. From the covert looks she continually gave Payson, Trent did not think the second husband was proving any more satisfactory than the first.

Under the steady influence of the stimulants Grant found he could not do without, he was developing a coarseness of face and manner which gave her increasing irritation. Before long she knew she would hate him. There were thorns with her roses.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson,
Illinois Fruit Association, Chicago

Illinois' seventy-fifth annual state fair is still the main topic being discussed in the Capital city. The fair just closed was considered one of the most successful in the history of the state, according to S. J. Stanard, director of the state department of agriculture. Permanent improvements costing over a quarter of a million dollars were made to the fair grounds. A record number of exhibits were also on display during the mammoth agricultural exposition.

The annual show opened on Saturday with auto races in which a number of dirt track drivers competed in open competition. On the following Monday the harness and running races were staged for the week.

The Illinois Better Babies conference, in which 1,400 children were entered; exhibits by federal and state departments; the night society horse show and special attractions in front of the grand stand each afternoon and evening, together with meetings of various live stock organizations and keen competition in the live stock show in the coliseum were among the special features of the exposition.

The permanent improvements of the year consisted of the construction of a group of live stock barns together with a stock pavilion; construction of permanent roads and the landscaping around the grandstand which was dedicated last year.

The days assigned for the show were as follows:

Saturday, August 18—Automobile day (auto racing).

Sunday, August 19—Sacred concert in front of the grandstand.

Monday, August 20—Children's day.

Tuesday, August 21—Springfield day.

Wednesday, August 22—Veterans' and Democratic day.

Thursday, August 23—Illinois day, when state officials and state Republican candidates attended.

Friday, August 24—Farm Bureau day—Mississippi day.

Saturday, August 25—Automobile day (auto racing).

Government architects, who have completed the designs for the new $850,000 federal building to be erected in Springfield, have made public a detailed description of plans for the new structure at the office of Supervising Architect James A. Wetmore. The new building will be in harmony with the surrounding edifices and in keeping with the trend of the city's architectural growth, the officials state. An interesting feature of the new building is the elimination of all daybeds, couches, davenport, overstuffed chairs and other furniture to create an atmosphere of restfulness and it is a safe wager that furniture of this description will find no place in the new federal building.

An interesting map of Illinois was on display in the dairy products exposition building at the Illinois state fair which just closed. Food inspectors' pictures were mounted in the territories they serve. This plan, according to Walter R. Kimzey, superintendent of the food inspection service, is to acquaint the public with the inspector assigned to the various parts of Illinois. It bears out the policy of the department of agriculture of which they are a part, in that they seek to merit the confidence and cooperation of the public. They find that enforcement of the laws that the division administrators is rendered more effective by educational methods.

In an opinion given to State's Attorney John Searing of Murphysboro, Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom holds that the mothers' pension tax must be included in the twenty-five cent limitation extended for county purposes.

It is mandatory on county boards to provide for cutting Canada thistles, an opinion given to Godlie Oxley, acting state seed analyst, says.

Illinois corn prospect is favorable in the central and northern areas, but mostly poor in the southern third of the state, according to the August 1 crop survey of the Illinois and federal departments of agriculture. Excepting spring wheat, the general crop prospect improved during July. Oats, spring wheat, barley, potatoes and soybeans are up to average or better; apples and peaches are about average; winter wheat, rye, hay, broom-corn and cotton below average but better than earlier expectations.

Gov. Len Small of Illinois, Gov. Sam A. Baker of Missouri, and Harry B. Hawes, junior senator from Missouri, have accepted invitations to attend the dedication and official opening of the Cape Girardeau bridge, to be held on Labor day, September 3.

Contracts have been awarded by the state division of highways for the following:

Route 47, section 122-B, Livingston Brothers, Peoria; $123,389.79.

Route 47, section 122, Livingston county, pavement; to Harman-Clark Brothers, Peoria; $12,303.31.

Route 47, section 122, Livingston county, pavement; to McMahan Construction company, Rochester, Ind.; $41,081.68.

Route 48, section 127-A, Macon county, grading; to Hart & Hart, Sanborn, Ind.; $20,334.67.

State fruit inspection forces, representing the division of standardization and markets, Illinois department of agriculture, report a heavy movement of peaches from southern Illinois counties. From temporary quarters at Centralia, Joe N. Cummins, chief fruit inspector, reviewing conditions through reports from the inspection forces, says the present bulk movement will continue for a short time. Illinois peach growers are finding markets better than had been expected, as the movement from the southern states is being absorbed rapidly; the Illinois product is a few days later than had been expected. Illinois housewives are urged to buy the local product for home canning operations, and are warned that the peak movement will pass into the tail end of the crop by about September 1.

The awarding of three state road contracts has been announced by Chief Highway Engineer Frank T. Sheets as follows:

Macon county bridge on Route 48, section 127-B, to C. F. Smith, Indianapolis, $47,457.55.

Iroquois county bridge on Route 40, section 138-B, Herrick Construction company, Carlinville, $33,949.90.

Macon county pavement on Route 48, section 128, C. J. Moritz, Effingham, $238,361.35.

The number of cattle on feed August 1, in Illinois, was reported about 10 per cent less than that of a year ago according to a survey of the feeding situation made jointly by the Illinois and federal departments of agriculture and agricultural college. The shortage of old corn on Illinois farms combined with the high price and scarcity of feeding cattle largely account for the marked curtailment of feeding.

Troop G, Springfield unit of the One Hundred Sixth Cavalry, Illinois National Guard, commanded by Capt. Bert P. Bringle, won the Foreman trophy in competition with all other organizations of the Thirty-third division in training at Camp Grant, Rockford, it was learned when the National Guardsmen returned to Springfield a few days ago from their two weeks' training camp. The trophy is the highest award made each year at the camp.

The division of poultry husbandry, Illinois department of agriculture, rendering flock inspection and accreditation service whereby commercial hatcheries gain recognition for their product as state standard accredited baby chicks presented a competitive exhibit of hatchery products at the state fair. This department, an added feature of the state fair poultry show, was shown in Machinery hall. Eight commercial hatcheries competed for cash prizes. Each competing concern showed at least one entry consisting of three pens of five birds each, with a distinct breed and variety of standard bred birds in each pen. One pen of American, one of English and one of Mediterranean class birds constituted an exhibit.

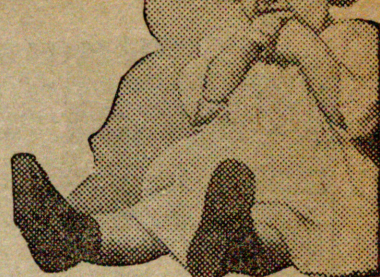

Sheriff James Kent has served on Col. C. R. Miller, director of public works and buildings; Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer, and other officials, a summons to answer an injunction suit to restrain them from building and paying for Route 165 in McLean county. The suit was filed in the McLean county Circuit court and is the outcome of a controversy concerning the location of a road which begins nine miles east of Bloomington, connecting Clarksville, Colfax, Archer and Sibley. Changes in the original routing made by the highway department caused the litigation.

George Huskinson, state superintendent of insurance, has issued a ruling designed to prevent the placing of surplus insurance with companies not authorized to do business in the United States. The ruling follows a complaint against William Fred Colvett, a surplus line agent, who was accused of undertaking to place surplus insurance with a French company not licensed to do business in this country.

The division of plant industry, Illinois department of agriculture, is presenting an interesting exhibit at the leading agricultural fairs of Illinois this season. Among other features, the exhibit shows the progress of the watermelon wilt prevention program. Many marketable varieties of melons have been crossed with a wilt resistant strain that has but little else to recommend it. The object is to develop a melon that has the flavor, texture, size and shape the markets of the country demand and one that can, at the same time, resist watermelon wilt in various sections of the state. "The experimental work will produce some splendid results this season," says O. T. Olsen, superintendent of plant industry.

The state of Illinois produced 200,000 more tons of coal in July than in June, according to the monthly report issued by A. D. Lewis, director of the state department of mines and minerals. Total production for July was 3,136,914 tons as compared with 2,923,005 tons in the previous month. One hundred and twenty-two mines were operating in July as compared to 124 in June and 36,424 men of the state's miner population of more than 70,000 were employed as against the 32,332 men at work in the pits in June.

It is always ready, always safe to use; in emergencies, or for everyday ailments. "Flying Scotsman" Train Has Nonstop Record

England's "Twentieth Century Limited," the "Flying Scotsman," has just begun making the longest nonstop run in the world—the 392 miles between London and Edinburgh.

Comfort, not speed, is the object, for the time remains at eight and a quarter hours. Heretofore there has been no way of changing engine crews without stopping the train, since it was held dangerous for two crews to occupy the cab at the same time.

Special locomotive tenders solve that problem. At the end of 200 miles a fresh driver and fireman emerge from the first coach, go through a covered corridor or gangway along the right side of the tender, and take over the engine. The men relieved go back the same way and finish the trip as passengers.

right when they are first heard. Where flower lovers get the name wrong at first, although they may hear the correct names later, they are often unable to get the name permanently fixed in their minds afterwards, because they are confused with the first.

Accordingly, Mrs. John E. Swisher was appointed by the Garden Club to outline a course of study thru which the members can learn all about flower gardening. Mrs. Swisher presented a summary of flowers and cultural directions for the study of the club. In her lesson she gave the common and botanical names, color of the blossom, how high they grow, and where, when and how to plant them. The club will learn all about at least five flowers at each monthly meeting. Those studied at the last meeting were: Ageratum (Floss flower), Alyssum, Althea (Hollyhock), Antirrhinum (Snapdragon), and Aquilegia (Columbine).

At the close of the meeting every one enjoyed iced lemonade and cake.

people have become. Lawlessness is rampant, graft in high offices goes unpunished in most cases; in fact the nations of the world are wondering if our greatness is not being undermined with internal disintegration. Mr. Hughes then pointed out that it is up to the home, the school, the church and such organizations as the Boy Scouts to train the youths of our nation who will be the leaders of tomorrow, to live upright lives, to be honest, courageous and clean and to place our country on that footing as designed by our illustrious men of the past.

Others taking part in the program were A. Swanson, chairman of the local troop committee, Rev. E. C. Lumsden, district superintendent of the M. E. church, who had charge of the dedication service, Paul Maina and the Boy Scouts, Campfire Girls, Rev. Morrison C. Galloway and others.

Rev. Mr. Galloway announced that the cabin if it were to be hired built together with the material and lot would cost over $2,000. Practically everything was donated. A debt of $100 remained unpaid. The sum was raised by pledges in a few minutes so that the cabin is now free of debt.

The cabin is nice and roomy and is very cozy. A fireplace will be used for heating it. The interior as well as the front exterior of the cabin is lighted by electric light. The cabin is located in a very pretty and rustic spot and has a spacious yard about it.

This cabin is a big asset to the boys of New Lenox and is a credit to the public spirited men of the community who made it possible.

MIRK MUCKERS has the audacity to propose a series of joint debates with candidate Emmerson, to cover every Congressional District in the state, not, as one would suppose, for the purpose of discussing comprehensive state policies, but with the avowed intention of airing before the already bored electorate, the "dirty linen" of each others private life and the asserted rascality in their public activities.

Mr. Thompson's accusations can have no possible influence upon those who have kept the Emmerson record for the past twelve years.

The voice of Illinois called for him in no uncertain terms in April and that voice more emphatic than ever, will call for further service in November.

It is certainly fortunate that the Democratic candidate has demonstrated, thus early, his true character and absolute shallowness by the conduct of his campaign, for he has made the error of his selection as chief executive of Illinois an impossibility, and has helped materially to save the State for, not only the Republican gubernatorial candidate, but for Herbert Hoover, the standard bearer of stable protective Government and the survival of TRITE and consistent equalization policies for the relief of the producers from natural resources in both factory and farm.

If Mr. Emmerson should consent to a debate with Mr. Thompson, the loose lipped LACUNA, by all means, let it be conducted in private and behind closed doors, for the public want none of it.

We are not concerned as to the possible source of Mr. Emmerson's wealth, neither are we loosing any sleep because of Floyd's association with the Looney family. He may be chief of the Daffy gang or janitor of the house of RUMDUM for all we know or care. We could not think any less of him.

No man can win public favor by a tirade of abuse in this campaign. No slanderous statements of illicit scandal mongers or panderers to public prejudice can avail, against the solid phalanx of unsalable virtue in those who have been selected because of their sterling character, ability, and high ideals to carry on the important work of State and National affairs.

Mr. Thompson, your ignoble fight against Herbert Hoover, the Nations Hope, is unavailing. You can not associate his name and fame with sordidness. You cannot drench with tainted oil, the brow of our anointed.

Mr. Thompson, you cannot pierce with poisoned darts the protecting armour of good citizenship honesty and integrity in public office of the Republican candidate for Governor of Illinois.

Illinois cannot be catalogued in the column of corrupt Politics. Our State always has and always will be in the Vanguard of constructive Statesmanship.

Secret of Big Light Beam

In huge electric searchlights that cast beams visible for 50 or 60 miles on clear nights, the carbons are not like those of ordinary arc lamps. Instead, the electrodes are cored carbons containing chemicals in the cores. The main source of light is a small body of gas contained in the crater at the end of the positive electrode. This crater of gas quadruples the strength of the beam.

Long and Costly Work

More than 300,000 miles of spirit-level lines have been run in the United States to discover the exact elevation of ground above sea level.

JIM

Around the corner I have a friend,
In this great city that has no end;
Yet days go by and weeks rush on,
And before I know it a year has gone,
And I never see my old friend's face;
For life is a swift and terrible race.
He knows I like him just as well
As in the days when I rang his bell
And he rang mine—We were younger then;
And now we are busy tired men—
Tired with playing a foolish game;
Tired with trying to make a name;
"Tomorrow" I say, "will call on Jim,"
"Just to show him I am thinking of him."
But tomorrow comes—and tomorrow goes,
And the distance between us, grows and grows,
Around the corner—yet miles away—
Here's a telegram, sir—"Jim died today."
And that's what we get and deserve in the end,
Around the corner, a vanished friend. — Selected.

Glorious Contemplation

An English parliamentary candidate wound up a frenzied oration as follows: "Gentlemen, the glorious victory which will swamp our opponents when the eve of the election dawns upon us will re-echo in words of gold through the corridors of time, until the last grand trump shall sound through the valleys on the mountaintops."

Why They Chuckled

Smith had been troubled by his neighbor's hens. One day he was looking at them over the fence when he inquired, "By the way, Jones, what did you pay for those fowls?" "A dollar apiece," replied Brown. "Ah, that explains it," said Smith. "I wondered what the things had to chuckle about."
